

Statistical Tooling

Nate Bachmeier
TIM-7101: Statistics for Technical Leadership
August 9th, 2020

Data analysts can choose the best tool from a wide taxonomy of applications that provide the right level of control.

Modeling a statistical problem requires the right tool for the job! The tool selection is which stage of the development lifecycle is currently under way.

During the beginning, Python can extract and transform data into tabular input for user interfaces.

As the model normalizes then optimizations can rewrite the code for performance critical scenarios.

